

Venomous Snakes on United States Navy Installations

Copperheads & Cottonmouths

Copperhead (Agkistrodon contortrix)

Picture: Alan Savitzky

Cottonmouth (Agkistrodon piscivorus)

Picture: Chris Petersen

Coral Snakes

Harlequin Coralsnake (Micrurus fulvius)

Picture: J.D. Willson

Texas Coralsnake (Micrurus tener)

Picture: J.D. Willson

Rattlesnakes

Eastern Diamond-backed Rattlesnake (Crotalus adamanteus)

Picture: Marty Korenek

Western Diamond-backed Rattlesnake (Crotalus atrox)

Picture: Doug Burkett

Sidewinder (Crotalus cerastes)

Picture: Greg Watson

Arizona Black Rattlesnake (Crotalus cerberus)

Picture: Erika Nowak

Timber Rattlesnake (Crotalus horridus)

Picture: Tammy Conkle

Speckled Rattlesnake (Crotalus mitchellii)

Picture: Rob Lovich

Red Diamond Rattlesnake (Crotalus ruber)

Picture: Robert Haase

Western Rattlesnake (Crotalus oreganus)

Picture: Rob Lovich

Mohave Rattlesnake (Crotalus scutulatus)

Picture: Richard Whittle

Panamint Rattlesnake (Crotalus stephensi)

Picture: J.D. Wilson

Pygmy Rattlesnake (Sistrurus miliarius)

Picture: Darryn M. Warner

Produced by Chris Petersen and Rob Lovich NAVFAC 2014

Snake Safety: If you encounter a venomous snake in the field, back away slowly and leave it alone. Many venomous snake bites are caused when attempting to harass or kill snakes. Bites from venomous snakes can be serious. If bitten by a venomous snake try to remain calm and seek immediate emergency medical attention.